WILL WITHDRAW SUPPORT TO COLLEGE.

The Methodists of Richmond and the section are apparently in hearty accord with the action of Central Methodist Church, Manchester, in declining to give further aid and support to Randolph-Macon College for the present.

The board of trustees take the position that the educational system of Randolph-Macon College is no longer under the control of the church, and that the college properly does not belong to the church. That the precedent followed by the Manchester church will be followed by other churches in the state is generally conceded. The matter will come to a head at the next meeting of the annual conference.

Rev. E. M. Rawlings, presiding elder of the Richmond district, has given out the following statement in connection with the matter:

"I think a large number of churches will withdraw their annual assessment toward the support of the college. The trustees do not seem to realize how widespread is the dissatisfaction at their action."

The resolutions adopted by the Manchester Church declare that a majority of the trustees of the Randolph-Macon system having "undertaken to repudiate the moral ownership of and the substantial equitable rights to control the system as existing in the Methodist Church of the Virginia and Baltimore Conferences, it is resolved:

"That this high-handed and unrighteous action should be stoutly resisted by our church, and that in the old Anglican way we at once withhold from the college board all supplies which we have been in the habit of contributing for many years until the college board shall return to a proper and right-sounding conception of its duty to our church, and to that end we advise all the members of our church to cease making any further subscription for the Randolph-Macon system. We advise and recommend all Methodist churches to do the same."

"We request the said two conferences, in default of said agreement, to take proper legal steps to have said trustees removed for perverting their trust."

DEFIED THE OFFICERS.

When Sheriff Frank Hurd and Deputy Sheriff Thomas H. Garrison, of Prince George's county, Md., went to Fort Washington a few days ago, for the purpose of dispossessing Joseph H. Arnold, the proprietor of a saloon there, they encountered a more obdurate man than they had anticipated.

Arnold had been placed in possession after a man named Gibbons had been ousted. Gibbons then went to law, and Justice Cox ordered that Arnold give him possession. Armed with an excerpt from the court's docket, the officers went to Fort Washington, and would probably have gotten Arnold out had he not displayed two guns. Arnold told the officers that their papers were not in proper form. The officers consulted, and decided that Arnold might be in the right, and it would be a dangerous thing to attempt to gain possession of the place by force.

Accordingly they withdrew, and after consulting counsel and having proper papers signed by Chief Judge John P. Briscoe, the officers again went to Fort Washington. Arnold, it is stated, again declared his intention of disavowing the order. He was leaning over his bar when this statement was made, but Sheriff Hurd was too quick for him. The officer pinned Arnold's arms to the counter and Deputy Garrison flashed a gun in his face and warned him that to resist would prove harmful. Arnold accompanied the officers to Upper Marlboro, where a charge of assault was lodged against him. On a writ of habeas corpus Judge George C. Merrick released him.
